Memorial Day 1943 EDITORIAL

Is this day any different this year from those before? Is its meaning any different this year? It should not be.

This is the only holiday created by our government, that is of a solemn and sacred nature.

Generations now living know the meaning of Memorial Day since our sons, husbands and fathers and brothers are now being taken from us to go to far corners of our country and the world; some who have already made the supreme sacrifice and will not return to their loved ones; some are prisoners; some are ill with fevers etc., or are in hospitals, perhaps permanently from effects of battles or are crippled, we have the effects of war, heart aches, memories, brought forcibly home to us as it has never been before and we on the home front are anxious to do all we can in their behalf.

But Memorial Day does mean a great deal to us all and every citizen at home should feel it a solemn duty to wend their way to the Service in their locality, large or small, to pay tribute to those who are giving their all so we may have the blessings that we still do enjoy today. The boys on the fighting lines today would surely love to be able to do that.

It was just a few years ago perhaps, when they took part in a Memorial Day service, maybe in the band, on the program, marching to the cemetery, decorating graves, do you remember?

Where will you be this year on May 30 or 31? Having a picnic, going on a visit, having a swell time?

But not alone should we think of our boys today who are in our armed forces, but maybe we can realize as never before, what our brave men of 1775 went thru. They had no fine camps or training centers, no good clothing, they froze their feet, and food—it was mostly noticable by its absence.

What of the boys of 1860, 1918, their hunger, privations, homesickness? And for what? That the generations yet to come, we included, may have the blessings we have today, you name them, chief among which is the Republic of our sovereign states, which a marvelous instrument of government created—our Constitution. It did not create a democracy, it created a Republic of the United States of America. And there is something we can and should do, to see that, that Republic is continually maintained.

John Cappel Estate In Mokena Sued For $5000

A five thousand dollar personal injury suit was filed the past week in Will County circuit court against Walter Cappel, executor of the estate of John Cappel, retired cattle dealer killed August 30, 1942, when his automobile collided with that of Wm. Bowling, Mattoon, at the intersection of Route 45 and Mokena road, mile east of Mokena.

The complaint was filed by Mrs. Virginia Bowling, wife of Wm., and in behalf of her son, James, a minor, and also by Wm. Bowling, against the estate of Mr. Cappel.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowling and their son were injured in the collision, also Clarence Kringle, a soldier from Chanute field, who was riding with them.

Mr. Cappel was enroute from his home to a nearby farm when the collision occurred. The complaint charges negligence.

MANY BLOOD DONORS HAVE RESPONDED TO CALL

The campaign which has been conducted by the Red Cross Committees of Frankfort, Lincoln Estates, Midlothian, Oak Forest, Orland Park and Tinley Park to obtain a minimum of 400 volunteers to donate blood to the Blood Bank, has been crowned with success and the operation of the Mobile Unit on June 8 and 9 in Tinley Park school is now assured. However, experience has shown that, ordinarily, quite a number of prospective donors are unable to appear or are rejected because of colds or other causes. Therefore, the Committees will be glad to have the names of any other Patriotic Citizens who may wish to volunteer.

Cards will be mailed to each donor, showing the date and time of his or her appointment and the suggested diet to be followed prior to the donation.

It is most important that the food instructions be observed, because otherwise the plasma cannot be used and your donation will have been made in vain. For this reason you are requested to avoid all fats or fatty foods for four hours before reporting. This includes milk, cream, cheese, meats, ice cream, butter, fried food, mayonnaise, salad oil, eggs and nuts. However, it is not desirable that you refrain from eating. It is recommended that you have a light meal of fat-free food made up of toast, without butter, jelly, coffee or tea without cream, crackers and fruit.

It should be emphasized that you can eat the above type of food at any time prior to your appointment.

After the donation, light refreshments will be served and a bronze emblem will be given the donor.

SPORTLIGHT
by GRANTLAND RICE

Grantland Rice

We thought of this the other night as we stopped in front of Gargantua's circus cage in "The World's Greatest Show." The last time we saw Gargantua, about two years ago, his weight was announced at 450 pounds. On this last occasion his weight was given out at 600.

At the moment, we wondered just what would have happened if Tunney, Dempsey and Louis together had entered his cage to throw right and left hooks, plus straight jabs or right crosses.

Tunney has always insisted that if you nailed a gorilla squarely on the jaw he couldn't take a punch and a quick collapse would follow. That could be true. But tangling up with 600 pounds of cat-like quickness and jungle ferocity still leaves Gargantua 1 to 3 in our book, or maybe 1 to 10.

Slow Courting

So far there is no early prospect of any little Gargantuas arriving on the scene. His mate is still in the next cage, where steel touches steel, but his trainer has been unable to detect any fondness on either side.

"It may take another year," one trainer said, "to bring about their friendship, and it may take longer. There's also the chance that Gargantua might prefer his bachelor life on to the finish. We can't afford to take any such risk right now." Gargantua apparently has a disposition composed almost exclusively of vitriol and TNT.

Pound for Pound

The best pound-for-pound fighter in the circus, or anywhere else, is the black leopard or black panther. Here is a much smaller animal that even a tiger will detour. Lightning-quick, powerful, the black leopard has only one real pleasure in life—and that is to fight.

"He is the only jungle animal who is always looking for a fight," Frank Buck says.

"Most animals only take the warpath for food. The black leopard takes the warpath for fun. And he is tough even for a tiger, who will outweigh him more than Joe Louis will outweigh Beau Jack or Henry Armstrong.

I found it generally agreed among circus trainers that nothing now existing on this earth, minus tanks or airplanes or machine guns, could handle a big, wild bull elephant. Here is one party that always gets a wide detour.

So far as the United States is concerned, "Bring-Em-Back-Alive" Buck not only rates the grizzly bear far above any U. S. animal contender, but he also gives him at least an even chance against the tiger and the lion.

The grizzly is big, quick, powerful—and both mean and smart. He is well protected, with a thick coat of hair around the throat—barbed-wire entanglements that defy claws or fangs. But after looking over Gargantua again, it is still my belief that Messrs. Tunney, Dempsey and Joe Louis combined would spend an extremely uncomfortable afternoon or evening in his cage.

I would like to suggest to Messrs. Tunney, Dempsey and Louis that if they invade Gargantua's lair they ride in on the inside of a tank.

Game Time

One of baseball's leading experiments should be to find the right time to start a game that will suit the needs or desires of war workers without causing any absentee snarls.

Cincinnati tried an 11:30 a. m. game on Monday and the result showed an improved attendance over the same Monday date in 1942. Apparently there won't be any big crowds through the week from Monday on through Friday. But there can at least be an improvement.

Changing Times

It was something of a jolt to see the Yankees moving into May without a hitter among the first five in the American league. Apparently the power that once belonged to the big bats of Ruth, Gehrig, Meusel, Dickey and DiMaggio is now transferred to pitching arms. Manager Joe McCarthy, one of the most conservative, will make no predictions, but he will tell you he is satisfied. That coming from McCarthy is a burst of optimism.

PEAKING OF SPORTS
by Bob McShane

The "match of the century" will develop when bashful Gunder Haag, famed Swedish middle-distance runner, arrives in the United States to pit his speed and endurance against America's best athletes.

The match of the century, of course, would see barrel chested Greg Rice, formerly of Notre Dame, meet the Ghost of Gavle, in a match designed to end a lot of arguments.

Holder of five official world records at distances from 1,500 meters to 5,000, including a 4:04.6 miles, Haag is looking forward to competition in America with all the eagerness of a rookie seeing big league action for the first time.

Haag boarded a tanker at Göteborg for his voyage across the Atlantic. In an interview before he left, he said:

"I love to run and it has always been my dream to go to the United States. I have never been outside Europe and I am looking forward to competing with America's great runners.

"When I get there I'll run any place and any time, and the AAU can let the profits of any meets go where it finds suitable—whether to war benefits or other funds."

Explanation

The sandy-haired Haag, a village fireman at Gavle, had a very definite purpose in mind when he made the latter statement. Previous reports published in this country indicated that he was unwilling, as a citizen of a neutral country, to compete in meets staged for the benefit of war relief agencies.

Haag denied the statement flatly. "I am ready to run, especially if it helps war invalids or other victims of the war," he said.

Tentative arrangements for Haag's appearance in this country include the National AAU championships, to be held in New York June 19-20, and special meets in other cities.

The AAU championship program has been arranged so that Haag, if he wishes, could run in the 1,500 meters on June 19 and in the 5,000 meters on June 20.

It is in the latter race he probably would be called upon to face Greg Rice, world indoor record holder at two miles and far and away America's leading distance runner. Rice is a chief specialist in the United States Maritime service. In New York, Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the AAU, said that all benefits from meets in which Haag competes would go to the U. S. Air Forces' Aid society.

Sports Spectacle

The race should be one of those rare sports spectacles where the issue is a clean cut test of superiority between champions. Such meetings seldom take place—largely because two great competitors seldom arise at the same time.

Old timers recall that in the field of distance running, the victory of Italy's Pietro Dorando over America's John J. Hayes at the old Madison Square Garden was one of the most talked of events of the century. Hayes had been proclaimed the Olympic marathon winner in London in 1908, after Dorando, leading until a few yards from the finish, fell and was helped over the line by friends. Hayes was given the title after Dorando was disqualified.

Then Dorando and Hayes turned professional and engaged in a series of marathons. The first of these took place in New York. The crowds were slightly terrific. Thousands couldn't attend because of safety restrictions. But Dorando proved himself. He won a majority of their races, thus vindicating himself in the eyes of his followers.

SPORTS SHORTS

The major league fielding record for first basemen is a .999 average set by John P. ("Stuffy") McInnis of the Boston Red Sox for 152 games in 1921.

Since Doug Mills became basketball coach at Illinois seven years ago, the Illini have won 61 games and lost 26 for a .701 percentage against Big Ten competition.

In 1942, 116 major league double headers resulted in standoffs and 123 others produced double wins for one of the contesting teams.

Washington, D. C.

SUBMARINE ANTIDOTE

A history making event took place recently in the long war against the submarine. Official tests were made of the helicopter, which, despite opposition of the navy, has been urged by officials of the army and War Shipping administration for anti-submarine patrol.

Within a few hours after the publication of a Merry-Go-Round story on this subject, a group of officials from Washington, including highly interested and highly placed officials of the British admiralty, British shipping mission, and the RAF, stood in amazement on the deck of a tanker offshore while a little airplane with a crazy rotary wing on top landed and took off from a deck space not more than twice the size of the plane itself.

It was a Sikorsky helicopter, piloted by a boyish colonel who reminded everybody of Charles Lindbergh in his younger days—H. F. Gregory, from Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, who knows more about helicopters than anybody else in the air force.

Gregory made 24 landings on the tanker during the two days of trials. He operated under all conceivable conditions—when the tanker was riding at anchor, when she was running at 15½ knots, when she was headed into the wind, and when she was running with the wind.

The War Shipping administration, which supplied the tanker, had offered to remove the mast, to provide a safer landing space. But inventor Sikorsky scorned that as "too easy." Accordingly, his plane was set down by Colonel Gregory in the space between the mast and the deck house, with only a 14-foot clearance on either side.

Far-Seeing 'Eyes.'

To the British and American shipping experts whose ships are going to the bottom every day, the significance of this feat was inescapable. They firmly believe the helicopter can be used to supplement the escort vessels for the greater protection of merchant ships in convoy.

It is too light to carry much striking power of its own, except a few rockets, but it can fly out ahead of the convoy, hover over the sea, spot the wolf pack, and report by radio to the escort vessels. This saves movement of the escort vessels, which in present practice have to maneuver constantly around the merchant ships, with heavy consumption of fuel oil.

Moreover, the helicopter, without firing a shot, brings alarm to the prowling submarine and causes the U-boat to dive.

Earlier acceptance of the helicopter was prevented by the navy's bureau of aeronautics, which contends that the machine is defenseless against the guns of a submarine. The defenders reply that the plane can dart about so crazily that it is too evasive to be easily hit. Moreover, helicopters can be built for $15,000 each, and the loss of a few would not be serious, compared with the loss of escort vessels.

In any case, the matter has gone beyond the stage of argument. The War Shipping administration is determined to have helicopters, and if the navy won't come along, WSA will make a deal with the coast guard to train pilots, and another deal with the war department to place the planes on its ships.

ARMY AND COAL MINES

John L. Lewis would have got the surprise of his life if he could have had a dictaphone recording of the conversation of Secretary of War Stimson and Gen. B. B. Somervell regarding the use of troops in taking over the coal mines.

Lewis had expressed public apprehension that the army had a plan to seize the coal mines in case of a strike. Undoubtedly subordinate army officers did have such a plan in mind.

But when Secretary Stimson sat down with Secretary Ickes, plus General Somervell and other army officers, the army expressed vigorous opinions to the contrary. General Somervell, accused by some of wanting the army to take over all civilian activities, made this remark:

"The last thing we want is an issue of the army against the people."

Secretary Stimson also expressed relief that Secretary Ickes, known as a staunch defender of civil liberty, had been selected by the President to handle the coal crisis. He offered Ickes every co-operation but expressed the hope that he would not have to use troops.

Soil Chemists Study Farm Crop Diet Needs

Determine Extent to Which Plants Use Food

If farm crops are provided with more substantial diet by the addition of nitrogen, phosphorus, potash and calcium to the soil, the plants will do their part by utilizing the increased nutrients and passing them on to their human or livestock consumers in the form of needed minerals.

This was the conclusion of a special study to determine the extent to which crops will use plant food when given the opportunity, conducted by Dr. George D. Scarseth, soil chemist of the Purdue university agricultural experiment station. He was assisted by Dr. D. H. Sieling, assistant professor of agronomy and R. E. Lucas, graduate assistant.

These soil scientists used test plots on which various fertilizer treatments had been applied and plots which received no treatment whatever. Then they compared the rate of plant food used by the crops grown on these plots.

Three different locations were used for the tests. These included Crosby silt loam plots at Lafayette, Ind., Bedford silt loam at Bedford and Clermont silt loam at North Vernon. The crops studied for three consecutive years included corn, wheat, oats, alfalfa and red clover, soybeans, timothy and lespedeza.

In general, the tests revealed that crops produced on fertilized plots utilized about twice as much nitrogen, nearly three times as much phosphorus and two and one-half times as much potash per acre as those grown on unfertilized plots.

At Bedford, for example, a corn, wheat, soybean and hay rotation grown on a plot treated with a 3-18-9 analysis, utilized 43 pounds of nitrogen, 12 pounds of phosphorus and 29 pounds of potash per acre. Plant food used by the same crop on an unfertilized plot amounted to only 20 pounds of nitrogen, 4.5 pounds of phosphorus and 12 pounds of potash per acre. On another plot where lime was added to the 3-18-9 analysis, the crops utilized 55 pounds of nitrogen, 15 pounds of phosphorus and 31 pounds of potash. When both lime and manure were added, the plant food utilization increased to 71, 21 and 52 pounds respectively.

On Clermont silt loam soil at North Vernon, a corn, wheat and hay rotation treated with a 3-20-12 fertilizer utilized 39 pounds of nitrogen, 14 pounds of phosphorus and 36 pounds of potash per acre. When lime was added, the utilization increased to 57, 19 and 38 pounds, respectively. The same crops used up only 18 pounds of nitrogen, six pounds of phosphorus and 15 pounds of potash when grown on an unfertilized plot.

Agriculture in Industry

Pecans

Nuts usually are thought of as delicious additions to pastry, candy and ice cream, but the Georgia school of technology views the pecan as raw material for industry.

Charcoal has been produced from the pecan hulls. When pulverized, it has as great power in decolorizing dyes as do other vegetable charcoals now being used industrially. Oil has been obtained from pecan meats which has a pleasant bland taste and odor. It becomes transparent when refined by the same process used for cotton seed oil. The oil can be used as salad oil or as a substitute for fats in baking. It has been used experimentally as a basis for cold cream which compares well with the finest commercial grades.

Ground nut shells may also have possibilities as abrasives or as a dusting agent for cleaning certain kinds of furs. They may also be useful for combining with dusting powders to kill insects.

Pecans are native to the southern states where the output is annually 20,000 to 50,000 tons. Improved varieties have been developed by selection and propagated by budding, but more than 50 per cent of the amount marketed are wild and seedling pecans which are native to the warm climate. Texas produces the greatest crop followed by Oklahoma, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and Arkansas.

Crop Protectors

Manufacturers of materials used to combat plant diseases and insects claim there will be adequate supplies of most insecticides and fungicides to protect field and fruit crops in 1943. They also say that there is a better supply of containers than last year, but dealers and farmers are asked to return to factories all usable empty containers.

A substantial increase in production of calcium arsenate has been requested by the government.

Speak of the fragile beauty that has flown,
It is too late to lance us of our faults—
We must go on unheralded and alone.

There in the dust of old, enchanted Inns
We sold the precious heritage of man
For rancid wine and unimportant sins
That stole the theme and purpose of our plan . . .

It was our world and now that world is dead
And loneliness is all that lies ahead!

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND INDUSTRY CONTROL
SO FAR during the war the federal government has invested between 13 and 15 billion dollars in the erection and equipment of war industry plants. These plants have been operated by private concerns working on government contracts.

The National Planning board proposes as a post-war measure that these plants be retrofitted for the manufacture of peace-time products and be operated by the government as a means of surmounting the after-war unemployment problem.

Such a move would mean the beginning of state capitalism in America.

Free enterprise as we have known it in America cannot live with state capitalism. Private capital cannot be induced to compete with the unlimited funds of government. When government enters business, private capital quits.

In the end we would all be working for the government, if we worked at all, and there would be no more jobs than would be provided by our present system of free enterprise. The incentive that produces invention, scientific discovery and progress would be gone. We would be a completely and permanently regimented people—worker, farmer, professional man, all of us. We would be permanently subject to the direction of a bureaucratic system, as are the people of Italy, Germany and Russia.

American people want none of that. Such a system is not what our armed forces are fighting for, or for which the home front is willingly making sacrifices. It is not a thing we can afford to encourage, even as a temporary solution of an employment problem. Once saddled upon the country, it means the end of the system which has made America great and prosperous and given to us the highest living standard the world has ever known. We must beware of any such expedient.

HUMAN RIGHTS AND PROPERTY RIGHTS

WHEN IN 1920 Gen. Leonard Wood was a candidate for the Republican nomination for President, we frequently ate lunch together at the Adventurers' Club in Chicago. A plank in General Wood's platform pronounced for property rights. I insisted that human rights were of far greater importance than property rights.

"If you can prepare a statement for me," said the general, "which defines human rights but does not encompass property rights, I will accept your statement."

I tried, but did not succeed. Human rights and the right to accumulate are inseparable. It is the human right to accumulate which is the foundation of American progress. It has encouraged invention and scientific investigation; it has built industries; it has put the soil under cultivation. The right to own, to have and to hold, is the incentive to work. General Wood was right.

BOX OF CANDY AND BUREAUCRACY

A SMALL CHILD with whom I have established a friendship likes candy in a box, but the mother objects to the child having more than a half-pound box. In a candy store I found an abundance of the kind of candy the child is permitted to have, and also a large supply of empty half-pound boxes, but none that were filled. Five young lady clerks were on duty and I was the only prospective customer in the store. But I could not buy a half-pound box of candy. I could buy the candy delivered to me in a sack. I could not put the candy in a box and sell it to me. They could send to some place a mile or more away and have a girl at that place put half a pound of candy into a half-pound box, and then sell it to me if I could wait an hour. A law, not passed by congress but created by executive decree, made it unlawful for those clerks to put candy in a box. We are today regulated by some 40,000 such executive decrees. That is our modern bureaucratic democracy.

THERE IS NO SUCH THING as a British empire. There is a British Commonwealth of Nations. Each is free and independent of the other, with the English king as head of each state, and he is but a symbol, with no actual authority. It is all seemingly simple, yet not easily understood.

TO BE A GOOD LISTENER may be a greater asset than to be a continuous talker.

FOOD RATIONING

CANADA is at war, as is the United States. We are fighting the same enemies. Canada is a food-producing nation, as is the United States. Canada is helping to provide food for England and the Allied armies. Canada has been at war more than two years longer than we have. Canada has not found a food rationing system necessary. She has depended upon the patriotism and good sense of her citizens, as we did in World War I, and it has worked.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin can ride any horse on his family's Wyoming ranch, but he wants a colt of his own. His father, a retired army officer, refuses to give him one until his school grades improve and he learns to take responsibility. Ken's mother tries to protect him from the stern discipline of his father and the youthful bullying of his older brother, Howard, who always manages to do things right. Captain McLaughlin has received a letter from Ken's school advising him that Ken has not been promoted. So, while the others prepare to round up the mares and colts, Ken has to stay in the house and study.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER II

When Ken left the kitchen the alarm clock on the wall shelf beside the spice closet pointed to twenty minutes to nine. He wondered if he should time himself right from then or from the moment he went into his room, or from when he set his books on the table. This was a very important point, but as he could not decide, he went upstairs as slowly as he could, just in case it was all part of the hour.

He paused on the landing in front of the picture of the duck. If he stood there looking at the duck picture he could get into another world. He knew how to do it. To get into another world you had to make yourself the same size, in your mind.

But he felt misgivings, standing there. His mother would hear, from the kitchen, that he hadn't gone all the way upstairs. He went on up, down the hall, into his room, and noisily closed the door. Possibly she would time him too.

He stood a few moments looking around. He and Howard each had a small room to himself.

Ken loved his room. The walls were white-washed, and there was a big window opening out front over the terrace and the Green. He could see everything from it. Sunshine poured in.

Best of all, Ken loved his little walnut bed, because that was really home.

It wasn't very tidy. He and Howard had to make their own beds, and he had made his in a hurry, before he went out riding. Now would be a good time to straighten it up. That was a good dutiful deed—about as good as studying—it probably could be counted in the hour. The quilt, which was light green with sprigs of pink and blue flowers on it, was crooked and humped over the bedclothes underneath. He threw it back, then paused, his eyes on the wall at the head of the bed.

There were these pictures—one on each side—about eight inches square, with a flat wooden frame an inch wide.

And inside the frame—

He dropped the quilt, moved up to one picture and stood minutely examining it. What people! Peasant people, his mother had told him, probably Swiss.

Down at the end of his room was the strangest picture of all.

Ken went to look at it. There was a verse written in the corner which he knew by heart.

"Intreat me not to leave thee, Nor to return from following after thee.

For whither thou goest I will go, And where thou lodgest I will lodge."

It was a picture of a desert land. And a man stood as if waiting to go, looking at the maiden for whom he was waiting. But she had run back to throw her arms around a woman, and there they stood, arms about each other. And the verse in the corner was what she was saying. They were dressed in long, draped, brightly colored shawls.

"Intreat me—" He jumped and ran back to the bed when he heard quick steps across the kitchen floor below. Outside the kitchen door his mother's voice called, "Here, Kim—Here, Chaps—"

This time he really finished the bed and smoothed the quilt. It looked very nice. He stood regarding it, thinking that now he must take down his books.

Resolutely he picked out his arithmetic book, sat down, opened it and began to think.

Suddenly Ken heard the sound of horses coming near the house and started up so quickly that the leg of his chair tangled with the leg of the table and he went sprawling on the floor, then scrambled up and over to the window.

Ken leaned out the window as far as he could to see the last of them as they went down the Green, just jog-trotting, and disappeared around the end of the house—

"Ken!" Nell's voice came floating up from the open window below. "What are you doing?"

He scurried back to the table and made it true before he answered, "I'm doing my arithmetic."

"What was that crash?"

"My chair fell over."

"What made it fall over?"

"It just fell over—"

Nothing more from Nell, and Ken summoned all his energy and frowned at his open book. He must make a plan. He would do cancellation over. He liked cancellation. It was fun crossing out the figures above and below the line and turning everything into nothing.

He hunted for his pad, opened all the drawers, and found it.

Then he heard Nell coming up the stairs, and she opened his door.

She had some fresh bureau scarves over her arm, and came in briskly and went to his chiffonier to change the scarf.

"I was thinking, Ken, it would be a good idea if you spent your study hour on that composition."

"The composition?"

"Yes, the one you didn't write. If you write it nicely we could send it to Mr. Gibson and tell him how it was you came not to write anything—that you were thinking about it—and he might let you have some credit for it."

"The one about the Albino," said Ken, and his eyes went thoughtfully to the window. "How would I begin it?"

"Have you got paper there?"

"Yes."

"Well, just pretend you're telling someone about it—someone who doesn't know. Me, for instance. Perhaps I've forgotten. Who was the Albino, anyway?"

Ken grinned, and said, "A big white stallion—just a bronc—who came over the border from Montana when they had a drouth there. Dad called him a big ugly devil but a lotta horse—"

"That's fine," encouraged Nell.

"And what did he do?"

Ken sighed deeply, and wrote, "The Story of Gypsy," carefully at the top of the paper.

Ken tore down the road. He'd take the short cut. They'd been gone almost an hour and they were on horseback. He'd meet them about halfway coming back maybe, and see the whole bunch moving. He'd find a good place and hide so his father wouldn't see him.

She snorted in terror and went straight up on her hind legs.

He trotted along in the irrigation ditch. It was dry because the water hadn't been turned in yet. This way he would avoid the road and the gates. Howard might be stationed at any one of the gates.

He left the ditch and climbed up a hill. From here he could see Gus and Tim working in the ditch in the Crooked Meadow and could hear their voices. Tim was swinging a pick; the sound of the blow reached him after he saw the pick land.

And a mile or more away he could see Castle Rock, the great beetling rock, jutting up seventy feet high, with peaks and parapets and turrets shaped like a castle. It overhung the aspen grove at the far end of the meadow.

That was where they were, down there near the rock. His father was rounding up the mares with their foals, getting them out of the woods, bringing them back through the meadow slowly. He never ran them.

Ken ran down the hill and headed for the big rock. He ran as far as he could and then stopped to get his wind again and make a calculation.

From where he was now, on the grazing land which sloped down to the barbed wire fence around the meadow, he could see the wide gate open and fastened back. That was so the mares could come through up to where he was. There was a sort of road here, and the mares would follow it naturally and stay right on it.

If he could hide somewhere near here, where he could keep his eye on the gate, he'd see them pass quite close.

He looked about for shelter. Here and there was a jagged outcropping of the pink granite which underlay the soil, here and there a small clump of wild currant bushes.

He drew back behind the bush and lay down and suddenly felt very tired and very happy. The report card and the saddle blanket and the study—all the unpleasant things—were behind him.

He woke with a jerk, coming up from such a deep place that it seemed he must have slept for hours.

He was bewildered and sat up, trying to gather his wits. Then he remembered and scrambled to his feet—would he be too late?—they might have passed while he was asleep—he ran out from behind the bush—head on into the bunch.

The mares were coming up from the meadow, almost noiselessly on the grass, McLaughlin in the rear, and Banner offside in the middle. They were walking as quietly as the cows coming in for milking.

In the lead was a powerful, long-legged mare with a shiny black coat. She carried her nose in the air, her wild, staring eyes ringed with white. Rocket, the loco mare, daughter of the Albino.

As Ken shot out from behind the bush, almost colliding with her, she snorted in terror and went straight up on her hind legs.

For a moment Ken was under the dangling black hoofs of her forelegs and smelled the heat of her body, then she twisted to one side, made a great leap and shot away, and it seemed to Ken that it was a hundred horses that leaped and scattered after her, instead of just twenty.

Ken ran to a pile of rocks and scrambled to the top so he could see all that happened.

Rocket had gone off at an angle to the line of march and was on a dead run, stretched out like a race horse, with the whole bunch after her. She was heading for the Rock Slide, a place where the grazing land broke down to the lower levels of the next pasture over a long curving hill of sheer rock. To go down it on foot, he and Howard had to sit and slide. No horse, not even the most sure-footed, could negotiate that drop. If she went over she'd go head over heels, she'd roll and bounce to the bottom, and all the others too, if they followed her, the whole band of mares and colts pitching down, somersaulting, rolling crashing—

"Whoa—there—whoa—whoa—" McLaughlin's voice rang out on a note of desperation. He was galloping as fast as he could to head off Rocket, but she had a long lead and Shorty was slow.

Then Ken saw the big stallion, Banner, shoot out of the crush. His bright chestnut coat was like flame in the sunlight. His feet thundered.

"Oh, go it, Banner—go it!" shouted Ken in an agony, dancing up and down on his rock.

The two horses were running at an angle to each other, Banner gaining. They converged near the Rock Slide. Banner's head was suddenly right over Rocket's, his golden mane mingled with her black mane, his mouth open and his big teeth bared.

Suddenly his jaws snapped and Rocket gave a furious squeal and stopped with a jar. Banner whirled and lashed and his heels struck her side with a ringing smack. The other mares telescoped up against them.

Then Banner was everywhere at once, biting, driving, wheeling and kicking the mares back.

Not one single mare lost—not a colt hurt or crushed—Rocket herself, panting and foam flecked, walking meekly back towards the road—

Ken's terror was now for himself. If his father should see him! He might not have. Might have thought it was something else that scared them, a coyote, or perhaps just Rocket's craziness.

He slid down the rock and sat hunched up at the base of it. He was fairly well hidden there, rocks and currant bushes all around him. He could hear the pounding of the horses' hoofs going farther away and he began to breathe more easily. Then a shadow fell on him and he looked up and saw his father sitting there on Shorty.

After one look into the blazing eyes under the down-drawn brim of the Stetson hat, Ken dropped his head and sat silent.

"I—I just came to see the horses," he muttered at last.

McLaughlin said nothing.

Ken looked up again and the look on his father's face made him burn all over.

He cried out sharply, "I didn't mean to do it, Dad—I didn't mean to scare them—"

He wanted to go on and explain that he had fallen asleep and then run out to see if they had gone—and Rocket was right there. But there wasn't time. Without a word of answer or blame, McLaughlin wheeled Shorty and went cantering away after the mares.

Ken felt as if he had been put out of the ranch, out of all the concerns that Howard was in on. And out of his father's heart—that was the worst. What he was always hoping for was to be friends with his father, and now this, so soon after getting home—His despair made him feel weak. He put his head down on his drawn-up knees and his hands were clenched tight.

After a while he slid down flat and slept again; a deep exhausted sleep this time that made up the hours he had lost riding so early that morning.

PETER'S COUNSEL TO SCATTERED CHRISTIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 1:1; 2:11-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the King.—I Peter 2:17.

Persecution for Christ's sake has been the lot of believers from the first century down to 1943. Sometimes it has been official, but more often unofficial, yet nonetheless severe and trying.

The manner in which Christians face their difficulties is one of the best testimonies to the reality of their professed faith. Sometimes, however, in the midst of their trials the enemy of their souls brings discouragement—and then they need the counsel and encouragement of others.

Such was the situation when Peter addressed his first epistle to the early believers who were scattered abroad (1:1). His counsel was just what they needed, and is equally helpful to us. They were to be

I. Separated As Pilgrims (1:1; 2:11, 12).

Christians are in this world but not of it. They are passing through, wayfarers on their way to the eternal dwelling place of God. That does not mean that they are not interested in the welfare of those round about them, or delinquent in sharing the responsibilities of life, but it does mean that they are to have the pilgrim's detachment from the things of the world and the flesh.

In the days of Peter, membership in the church was not considered a normal or respectable thing. It marked a person as belonging to a hated sect, one which was falsely accused of many evil deeds. For example, Christians met at night, men and women together for communion service. Because they spoke of this as a "love feast," they were accused of immorality, and because they spoke of the body and blood of Christ they were said to be eaters of human flesh.

Christians must meet such malicious reports. How? By silencing their accusers by their good works.

II. Submissive As Citizens (2:13-18).

One of the hallmarks of Christian character is willing and gracious recognition of proper authority, whether it be in the state, in the place of employment, in the school, or in the home. He does this for the Lord's sake (v. 13), and even when that authority is in the hands of an unreasonable man.

This does not mean that the Christian is to encourage or countenance tyranny and oppression, but that he is loyal to the state and to his employer, even though the present representative be a hard, unjust man. In all well ordered society there will be proper and effective means to correct injustice. But in and through it all the Christian shows his faith by his behavior.

Observe that government, in the plan of God, is for the purpose of keeping order, encouraging the good, and punishing the evil (vv. 13, 14). The powerful influence of the Christian Church should keep it in that right channel, or bring it back if it has strayed. Always loyal and obedient, the believer should use his ballot and his personal influence to establish and support good government.

III. Suffering As Christians (2:19-25).

Christ is our "example" (v. 21). Since some have interpreted this word and the statement "that ye should follow in his steps" as indicating that we are saved by our imitation of Christ, it is well to point out that this would be quite impossible. We would have to begin where He began—He was without sin (v. 22). But we have all "sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). We need a Saviour—not an example as far as redemption is concerned.

In the ever present problem of suffering, we as redeemed ones do have Christ as our example. He who was sinless and without fault bore the shame and suffering of Calvary without complaint. When He was reviled He did not retaliate, when He was hurt He did not threaten revenge (vv. 22, 23), but was willing to leave the ultimate judgment in the hands of God, who will have the final word.

We ought to do the same when we suffer for Christ's sake. If we suffer because of our own sin or folly, we can claim no credit for bearing it patiently (v. 20). But when we have done well and then are persecuted, we have opportunity to show whether our profession of being followers of Christ really means anything. At this point some Christians lose their testimony and influence by a bitter, vengeful spirit.

These are trying days for the souls of men. In many parts of the world Christians are forced to drink the bitter cup of persecution. To the glory of God we record the fact that they are doing it heroically and in a true Christian spirit.

Dear Friends: I received your lovely Easter box and it made a big hit with me and the boys in the barracks. The training is tapering off a little and we are not getting as much physical conditioning as we did the first few weeks. We are going into practical training in the art of making war.

I was pretty sad upon hearing about my brother's accident, for I am away out here where I could not do anything to help. I wish to thank all the kind town folk who went to visit him in the hospital and made things easier for him.

I miss the old town a lot but as things are going in the world today I wouldn't trade places if I could.

I hope you all enjoyed a nice Easter and are doing your best to keep each other happy as we go thru these trying times.

Thanks to all who sent me gifts and letters and all my other friends in Tinley. Till I hear from you again or you hear from me I remain always a friend.

I miss the old town a lot but as things are going in the world today I wouldn't trade places if I could.

I hope you all enjoyed a nice Easter and are doing your best to keep each other happy as we go thru these trying times.

Thanks to all who sent me gifts and letters and all my other friends in Tinley. Till I hear from you again or you hear from me I remain always a friend.

Pvt. Milton Lucius, 36651635, Co. A 517th Para Inf., Camp Toccoa, Ga. April 25, 1943

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to let you know I received the cigarettes, candy and cookies you sent. I appreciated it very much. I also want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for your kindness.

The weather is cool here today. Guess I'll close, wishing you a happy Easter, hoping to see you all soon. Thanking you again.

Sincerely yours, Pvt. Theodore Zielstra, Btry. B, 230th FA Bn, APO 30, USA. Camp Blanding, Fla.

April 27, 1943

Dear Friends: I received your box laden with cookies, candy and cigarettes yesterday. I wish to thank you very much for the fine box; it sure has about everything a fellow could ask for in the way of extra enjoyment. I especially appreciate a box such as this because we get out only on Saturday and Sunday nights and there is no place to buy candy or cigarettes on the campus.

The last time I wrote I was stationed in Monmouth, Ill. However, since then I have been transferred to New Mexico Normal University in Los Vegas, New Mexico. We are at a War Training school here in which we receive flying instruction and ground school work. We have to roll out at 4:45 a.m. so that we may get out to the airport early in the morning. The air is less turbulent in the morning and therefore much better for beginners. We are up 45 minutes at a time seven days a week. We fly only light planes here, namely Taylorcrafts and Aeronaas which are high winged monoplane with side by side dual controls.

The scenery out here is very nice for we are only 60 miles from the foothills of the Rockies. This sounds like a great distance but they only appear to be 10 miles away. Distances out here are deceiving.

I'm getting a little sleepy so I will close for now thanking everyone who had part in making up these swell boxes.

Sincerely yours,

A-C Donald Boerner, Kennedy Hall

Los Vegas, New Mexico.

P. S. I have been receiving the Tinley Park Times regularly and I also wish to thank you for this link between the old town and me.

April 27, 1943

Dear Folks:

Just a few lines to let you know I received your package and to thank you very much for it. The candy and cookies tasted very good and the cigarettes came in very handy.

The weather down here in Texas has been very nice it has been fairly warm already, but it will probably get a lot warmer yet. I will close now hoping this letter finds you all well and hoping to see you soon.

Sincerely yours,

Walter Bormet, A S N 16101425, 94 3rd Guard Sqdn, Perrin Field, Sherman, Texas.

April 29, 1943

Dear Friends:

I received the swell box of cookies and candy and cigarettes, thanks very much. I have changed bases. I am out here in Colorado for the beginning of my flight training. It sure is pretty country here the weather is swell, its hot during the day but cold at night.

The ground Schooling I received here is a little more advanced than what I had before. Thanks again for the package.

Sincerely,

Gene Anderson A-C USNR, WTS, USN Mesa County Junior College, Grand Junction, Colo.

My hope, is that my son, when I am gone, will remember me, not from the battle, but in the home repeating with him our simple daily prayer, 'Our Father Who Art in Heaven.' World news subjects were presented by Mrs. Hedges, who also conducted a quiz on the articles. Mrs. Weatherbee read a paper on undulant fever.

This is the first time in my life I have received a Valentine in April but it was swell to know that the folks at home have not forgotten me. It takes a long time to get the mail to us here. But the greatest thrill we have is to hear that there is some mail in for our outfit. No matter how old the mail is, it is always nice to hear from home. Thanks for remembering me. I appreciated the card and 'kerchief more than you can imagine. Thoughtfulness like that really makes a fellow feel swell when he is an awful long way from home.' The letter was sent by V mail. And from Lloyd Lühring in New Guinea: "I received your gift and card and want to thank you very much. I am in the best of health, have left Australia and am somewhere in New Guinea. There are many kinds of tropical fruits here and have been eating lots of coconuts. It has been two years since I have seen snow. It sure is altogether different living here in the tropics. It is hot during the day but rather cool at night which makes it good for sleeping. There sure can't be many boys left around home, but as yet I have not met any of them here. Say hello to all at home.

With customary Memorial Day travel curtailed this year because of gasoline and tire rationing, Riverview, Chicago's famous amusement park, is preparing for crowds of young and old who will spend the holiday in the city.

The Park is now swinging into its stride for a full season of fun and entertainment, its colorful two mile midway of rides and attractions ready for all who like thrills and merriment in the open air at low cost. Maintaining its policy of former years, Riverview will again have special bargain prices a total of six afternoons and evenings during the week. Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons, as well as Saturdays until school closes will be 2c days, while Tuesday and Thursday nights will be 5c nights.

Lunch was served and all extended good wishes to Chas. Burkhardt who was to soon enter the army.

England.

Pfc. Robt. Frisch is enjoying a 15 day furlough at the home of his sister, Mrs. Agnes Hayden.
Pvt. Alfred Maue, who is stationed at Camp Ellis, Ill., is helping to combat the flood at Beardstown.

We have two more interesting letters from our boys this week. The following is from one of our Navy men, Seaman Russell Bennett: "Your birthday gifts didn't catch me at my last station, but they arrived here today. I wish to thank you all for your thoughtfulness and kindness. The gifts could not have been more appropriate, nor could they have been more appreciated. Thanking you again,

"Yours sincerely,
"Russell."

And this one is from one of our Army men; Cpl. Robt. Nemeth, who is stationed at Camp Robinson, Ark: "Dear Ladies: I received a lovely Easter card from you sometime back and I wish to thank you very much for it. Although I do not get but very little time to answer I would like to hear from a few of the home folks once in a while.

All of my men enjoy getting nice cheery newsy letters from home. The men run faster for mail call than they do for chow call. I hope this letter finds the community enjoying good health and I wish every one a lot of happiness and good luck.

"Sincerely,
"Robert."

We know the boys are always glad to hear from home. We have the names and address of all our boys who are in the service and will be glad to give them to anyone. Just call Mokena 2381 or drop a card to the Women's Service Club, Mokena. Our boys need mail as well as ammunition.

APPLICATIONS FOR WAR RATION BOOK NO. 3 NOW BEING MAILED

Letter carriers in the seven mid-western states have already started delivery of approximately six thousand application cards for War Ration Book No. 3 which will provide new ration stamps to replace those running out in existing books. Distribution of these cards will continue until about June 5, Raymond S. McKeough, Regional OPA Administrator announced. A total of forty million application cards are being distributed throughout the entire nation, he said.

Chicago will be the mailing center for War Ration Book 3 for the states of Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Lake County Indiana in which McKeough estimated some 18 million books will be distributed. The distribution of the books will be under the supervision of Edw. L. Stegen, Regional Rationing Executive.

"While OPA suggests that the applications be filled out promptly upon receipt," McKeough said, "the public is urged not to mail them until June 1. By that date the post offices will have mail channels cleared for fast handling and OPA mail centers will be geared up to process the cards and mail out the books."

Cards mailed in advance of June 1 will not be processed at least until that date and since mechanical arrangements will not have been completed, books mailed prior to June 1 may be lost or misplaced.

HINTS FROM PUBLIC SERVICE ON THE USE OF YOUR ELECTRIC WASHER

Sure we've been around a long time and have seen a lot of service. But we're a long way from the rag bag. We're still in good condition and our appearance is as neat as ever.

Of course all the credit goes to the lady of the house for washing us frequently and gently. She discovered long ago that when a garment gets extra dirty it requires hard rubbing and soaking which causes wear and fraying.

What's more, she knows how to wash clothes and how to use her electric washer for best results. What's the secret? None whatever. If you'd like to know how to get better results on wash day and how to conserve your family's washable clothes, we'll be glad to show you.

Run warm water into the tub of washer, but do not fill to water line. The water should only reach the water line after a load of clothes has been placed in the tub. Turn on the washer and pour in the soap until you have about 3 inches of suds.

Put white, slightly soiled clothes in first while the agitator is running. If clothes fail to turn over regularly, there are too many pieces. Washing time—about 7 minutes. If washed too long dirt and soap-scum are re-deposited in the fabric.

Remove clothes from washer before draining the tub. Rinse until water is clear. The first two rinse waters should be of the same temperature as the washing water. The last rinse, or bluing, may be with cooler water.

In wringing, spread clothes out for uniform pressure on all parts of each article. Don't have the rolls too tight. For large pieces, like bedspreads and blankets, the pressure should be greatly reduced. In some washes this is done automatically.

The color-fast—After soaking the color-fast cottons and linens for 5 to 20 minutes to loosen the dirt, use fresh, lukewarm suds to wash them. The first rinse should be lukewarm, and the following rinses slightly cooler.

Slightly unfast—The washer can be used for clothes with slightly unfast colors. But you must not soak them. Use only lukewarm suds and wash quickly. Clothes with unfast colors should be washed individually by hand.

Round table conferences were held by chairmen of the various standing committees. Luncheon was served at noon in the Worth Methodist church and was followed by a Publications and Poster Exhibit.

The afternoon speaker was Miss Marie Dohm, Cook County Nutritionist whose subject was The Place Of Nutrition in Defense. Members of the Midlothian unit presented a short skit Before and After Council Treatment.

A short business session and installation of officers completed the days program. The following officers were installed: Pres. Mrs. W. Leonard, Oak Lawn; Vice president, Mrs. E. Wocel, Evergreen Park. Sec. Mrs. W. Gaddis, Oak Lawn, Treasurer. Mrs. M. Moore, Midlothian.

Orland was represented by: Mesdames Harry Anderson, Albert Lorenz, Sigmund Sith, Harry Pihl, Fred Yunker and Sherman Knox.

Some time ago, there appeared in this column several articles about Orland Parks most eligible bachelor Eddie Spletzer who was making trips to the city of Moline and it was rumored that a certain Phoebe was the cause of it all. All doubt on this matter has been cleared by the receipt of the following by Mrs. Karl Ekberg:

"Mrs. N P Anderson requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter Phoebe Elinor to Mr. Edward G. Spletzer on Saturday, the fifth of June, 1943, at 5 o'clock P M at 1925 Fifteenth Street, Moline, Ill. Reception following the ceremony at the Carlson Tea Room, Moline, Ill." Congratulations Eddie and Phoebe.

At the meeting of the PTA of School District 137, held May 18 the following officers were installed: Pres. Mrs. Frank Colangelo, vice president Mrs. Chas. Stewart, Sec. Mrs. Robert Roth, Treasurer, Mrs. John McKean, Mrs. S S Knox, Pres. of the Orland Park PTA served as in stalling officer.

Mr. J. Stanley McIntosh, Assistant County Supt. of Schools, was the guest speaker and stresses the necessity of a good reading course for the proper training of all elementary school children. Mr. McIntosh complimented the Directors of School district 137 on the capable and efficient manner in which they had met the emergency of the increased demand for school facilities brought about by the influx of new residents in the community and presented the Board with a Certificate of Recognition for Standard Elementary Schools. Refreshments were served.

Sherman S Knox, Jr. has been transferred to the Quartermaster Detachment. His address is: QMC, Det. ASN 36731218, Camp Wolters, Texas.

Pfc Harold Kay, has been transferred to Camp Livingston, La. His address is, No. 36625251, Co. F, 149 Inf APO 38, Camp Livingston, La.

Mrs. Knox is in receipt of a card from Pvt. Casey Wydeveld, stationed at Ft. Riley, Kansas, as follows: "Dear Knox: I get the paper every week and I am sure glad to get the paper from back home. It makes me feel more at home when I read the paper, and want to thank you for it. Yours truly, Casey Wydeveld."

Casey, the thanks should go to Mr. Wm. Semmler, editor of the Orland Park Herald and the Aux. of Orland Park Post 526. American Legion as they make it possible for the boys in service to receive the Orland Park Herald.

The entertainment and supper, sponsored by Mrs. Edw. Lawlor for the benefit of St. Michael's parish last Sunday was well attended.

We have received the following letter from Pvt. Clarence Creer, 55th Training Group, Sqd. 157, Keesler Field, Miss.

Dear Mr. Semmler: Your paper has been arriving regularly since my induction into the Army, and I want to say that it is very much appreciated. Being so far from home, it is a pleasure to read the various events which are happening in the home town.

This camp is relatively new and is located near Biloxi which is on the Gulf. It gets very warm here during the day but cools off at night. We have plenty of food and plenty of work, but that is expected in the army.

I also want to thank the American Legion Auxiliaries for the service kit that just arrived. I am glad to hear from anyone and will do the best I can to get the letter answered.

Regards,
Clarence Creer

I suppose you read about the flood here, it sure is terrible. It drove a lot of families out of their homes. I have never dreamed Id see a flood so bad.

Well I wish to thank you again for remembering me and I will never forget all that the people of Orland have done for me. Well thats all I know, I am not very good at writing letters.

As Axis Troops Surrendered to Allies

Covered by a Sherman tank, German prisoners prepare to move on after surrendering themselves to Allied forces in North Africa. A short time later all organized enemy resistance had ceased in all sectors, and an estimated total of 150,000 German and Italian troops had been taken prisoner, together with their commander, Col. Gen. Juergen Von Arnim. Vast quantities of guns and war material of all kinds were captured.

Wash Day on Amchitka Island

F. D. R., Churchill, Plan Final Victory

With the trumpets of the great Allied victory in Tunisia still reverberating around the world, Winston Churchill, Great Britain's prime minister, and President Franklin D. Roosevelt, met once more in Washington to further plan the "unconditional surrender" mapped out for the enemy. This was the first meeting of the two leaders since the historic conference at Casablanca. Shown at left is the President, and, at right, Winston Churchill, with his inevitable black cigar.

Quints Hold Center of Stage in Launching

Eighty thousand spectators packed the huge Butler shipyards at Superior, Wis., to witness the floating of five brand-new Allied vessels—and also the Dionne Quints' first appearance on American soil. The Quints, who acted as sponsors, are shown before a U. S. immigration officer.

Best of Care

Primary concern of medical corpsmen aboard every navy ship is the life and health of shipmates. From the instant a man falls until he is borne ashore he gets the best of care that science can provide. This marine, wounded in a raid, is being carefully removed from a submarine hatch.

Vitamins for Victory

Bobby Zavattaro, five-year-old husky who was crowned "child health king" in New York, has taken to farming. Here he is shown working on his plot (in soil box) on the roof of the Children's Aid Society building, where some 20 children are raising vegetables for vitamins and victory. Joan Culeton, four, lends a helping hand.

It Will Be 'Cooler'

Fear of cooling off in the "cooler" fills the face of eight-year-old Eddie Conlan as he looks up into the imposing figure of the law. A temperature of 85 in New York prompted Eddie to cool off in the East river, but alas, the law put an end to that cooling thought.

T. R. Wins Honors

Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt makes his way through a slit trench, somewhere in North Africa. The general and his son were both cited for gallantry by the war department.

Leaders in New and Important Roles

Shown at left is Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, new commander of the U. S. forces in the European theater, successor to Lieut. Gen. Frank Andrews, who was killed in a plane crash in Iceland. Center: Leon Henderson, former price administrator, who has returned to Washington as editor-in-chief of Research Organization Service Business. Right: Maj. Gen. Omar Bradley, who has replaced Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton as commander of the American 2nd Corps in Tunisia. General Bradley is an infantry expert, and assumed command when infantry could serve best in the Tunisian theater of war.

Guns That Speak With Full Authority

Shown at left is our new 240 mm. howitzer, the M-1, as described in the Field Artillery Journal. It is more mobile and more powerful, and even more accurate than its 1918 counterpart. It travels in two loads on high speed trailers. Less digging is required for its emplacement, and this is speeded by a clamshell bucket. Right: Naval gun crew shown during training in the operation of a three-inch anti-aircraft gun at the U. S. navy anti-aircraft gunnery training center in Point Montara, Calif. Guns fire at sleeve targets towed from planes over the water.

Deadly Trio With High Combat Record

This is the "big three" of one of the busiest American Spitfire outfits in North Africa. Primarily assigned to protect bombers raiding Axis bases, these pilots have a high combat record. Together they have accounted for 14 of the 38 enemy planes bagged by the squadron. They are, left to right, Lieut. S. Field, Lynn, Mass.; Capt. Norman McDonald, Framingham, Mass.; and Sergt. James Butler of Grass Valley, Calif.

Plain 'Uncle Joe'

Back home for a visit following important conferences in Washington, and before returning to the job of commanding U. S. forces in China, Burma and India, Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell (Uncle Joe to you) posed for this picture.

No Smiles and Heils for Der Fuehrer

Wounded Germans sit helpless in wheelchairs while Hitler congratulates them during a Nazi celebration at a hospital in Berlin. Not long ago he promised them a glorious victory, and by the expression on their faces these men are probably wondering if this is what he meant. Photo was copied from a German magazine.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To mend small holes in window screen, put a piece of mosquito netting over the hole and coat it with varnish. When dry, apply another coat or two.

Woolen garments will retain their fluffiness and will not shrink if a teaspoonful of glycerine is added to the warm water in which they are washed and rinsed.

If you find fruit jars difficult to get clean after cold packing corn or meat, rub the jar with salt and wash in the usual way.

If too much salt is put in the soup, a few slices of potato will remove it. A raw potato in the refrigerator will absorb unpleasant odors.

Put a sponge in the bottom of your potted plants and you won't have to water them so often.

Vinegar eliminates odors. Don't put away a frying pan that smells of onions, fish or some other strong-flavored food. Put some vinegar in the pan and bring to a boil. Then wash as usual.

Baking materials are precious these days, and burning a cake is little short of a tragedy. When putting a cake into the oven set an alarm clock for the time the cake should be finished baking. This is a big help, especially when visitors drop in, and one is apt to forget all about the cake in the oven.

When making berry pies, mix with the fruit measurement for one pie about two tablespoons fine quick-cooking tapioca to make a clear thick juice that should not run out during baking and that will serve neatly.

If your family considers squash a tasteless vegetable, try serving it with a white sauce with melted cheese in it. They will change their minds.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

When our present synthetic program has materialized, a B.F. Goodrich official predicts the resultant rubber surplus will cause one of the most serious post-war marketing problems. What to do with the huge stocks of synthetic and natural rubber will test the ingenuity of manufacturers and sales executives.
A substitute for rubber adhesive tape is being sought. Thousands of pounds of this tape are being used to protect plastic airplane glass in transit to airplane factories.
Seventy-three percent of the 140,000 workers of 94 war plants in 10 states go to and from work by private automobiles. Nearly three-quarters of the cars used by these workers have tires more than half worn out, many of them unfit for re-capping.

Mom

"Sausages for breakfast! I can smell 'em!" Small Joe came tumbling downstairs fastening the belt of his shorts as he came. He made a bee-line for the kitchen. Pop was already sitting at the table, reading the paper, while Mom held the handle of the frying-pan over the stove. Small Joe came close and sniffed the delicious smoke, wriggling all over with early-morning joy.

"Better be thankful for them while you can still get them." One glance at Mom's face told small Joe this was one of her tight-lipped days. "Not a drop of coffee in the house, and no sugar left to put in it if there was. Some war!" Small Joe kept still.

"Letter for you, son." Pop said in his quiet voice. Small Joe made a leap for his place at table. There it was, a private personal letter for him alone, propped against his milk glass.

"Hey, Pop! It's from brother!" Small Joe was pulling the envelope apart and diving into the contents.

"Hey, look what he sent me." He passed over an oblong of thick, crinkly paper while he leaned over the sheet of writing-paper.

"A twenty-five dollar War Bond," Pop said slowly. Mom turned and looked at it over Pop's shoulder, with the frying-pan in her hand.

"Listen what he says. 'How are you doing, kid? Hurry and grow up so you can help me slap the Japs. Aren't you most big enough to get into the Army? Here's something for you in your name. Let's the whole family gang up and help to win this war.'"

Pop and Mom were silent. But small Joe didn't notice that. He was full of his letter and his War Bond.

"Gee, Pop, in six years I could get into the Army, couldn't I, Pop? Gee, Pop, I want to be a soldier like brother and fight in this war. Gee, isn't that bond nifty? Look, it was issued in Honolulu. It's mine."

But Pop was looking at Mom and Mom was looking at Pop. There were tears in Mom's eyes. She shook her head sharply. Pop reached out and patted her hand gently.

"Well, can't let our soldier boy beat us to buying War Bonds, can we, old lady?" was all he said.

She shook her head again. "I guess if he can give up his job and go off to war I can do some fighting back at home," she said in a queer voice. Small Joe looked up at her in surprise. She saw him looking at her and spoke sharply. "Well, Joe, we're about ready to eat. Say grace."

Small Joe folded his hands and bent his head as he had been taught.

"Oh Lord, we thank thee for this food and all thy bountiful gifts..."

"Amen," Pop said.

"Amen," Mom said. "Now eat your good sausages."

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

One of the most essential articles of equipment for our soldiers is his canteen. In equatorial countries and in other warm climates they are particularly important to the welfare of our fighting men.

The canteen, now being largely manufactured of plastics, costs about 43 cents. The canvas cover . . . about 41 cents or 84 cents in all. Your purchases of War Bonds, or People's Bonds, will buy many of these for our men in the Solomons or in Africa where they are badly needed.
